What the Wrestlers, Boxers and Base Ball Artists Are Doing.

Of all games lawn tennis appears to afford the only exception to the rule "youth will be served." Youth takes a back seat on the tennis courts and age and experience combine to hold the upper hand. Though this game calls for the agility of youth more strongly than any other sport, the veterans appear able to offset this quality which is plainly against them with craftiness and stroke control, which can only be acquired through long terms of hard practice.

The cracks of yesterday are the cracks of today, and they continue to calmly brush aside the younger aspirants, seemingly saying "not yet," and forbearing to even add "but soon." The Larneds, Clothiers, Wrights and Littles, who were making tennis history in America ten years ago, have been able to block the Behrs, Touchards, McLoughlins and other phenomenal players of the younger set from the first place. In England it is true that Wilding, the champion, is only about 30 years of age, but he is a veteran player, having won his first important tourney in 1898.

His English championship was won in 1910, when the old English veterans, H. L. and R. F. Doherty, A. H. Smith and F. H. Risely had all retired from play, and in the last two years he has retained his honors with considerable difficulty, not from young players, but from Dixon, Barret and Gore, the latter of whom is 44 years old, while the other two are each close to the forty-five mark.

In Australia, Brooks ten years ago was the leading player, and he has maintained his supremacy ever since.

Even sectional championships have been generally held by experienced players throughout America. The Pacific coast is the one section in which youth has frequently succeeded in toppling the old-timers from the place of honor.

Sam and Sumner Hardy, Melville H. Long and Maurice McLoughlin all gained the coast championship before they had attained the age of 17 years. This does not show that our men are likely to go back sooner than those of other sections, but rather that our players can rarely afford to continue the hard practice necessary to maintain their positions after they finish their school and college life.

In the Eastern States many of the experts are so situated that they can suit themselves in this respect, and where this is the case they make a good showing against the younger players who try to dispose them.

California players, however, have strong hopes that this year one of their star youngsters will walk away with the blue ribbon of American tennis, and a strong delegation will be sent East after the national championship.

The Eastern tennis journals, in discussing the possibilities of the "young blood," have come to the conclusion that the thrills of the game will be furnished almost exclusively by the young Californians, and agree that without them the last two seasons would have been devoid of interest.

The Polo Season.

For some weeks past the polo enthusiasts have been putting in some strenuous practice every Saturday afternoon up at the Sunnyside polo field. Maui always sends a crack team to Honolulu, for the inter-island championship matches, and from all appearances the team this year will be the best ever sent out of Maui. The team as chosen will be: No. 1, A. W. Collins; No. 2, Harold Rice; No. 3, F. F. Baldwin; No. 4, Dave Fleming.

Many new men have come out this year, and while none of them have shown speed enough to make the team, still they are all working strenuously on the second team, in an effort to give the first team the hard practice they need in order to perfect their play.

When the Maui team comes back with the championship the second team will share in the triumph, as they will have the satisfaction of knowing it was their untiring efforts which helped make the team what it is.

Maui has always gone on the field well mounted, but this year they are better off in this respect than ever. Several new ponies are being worked and when the championship series is played these new ones together with the tried veterans will have the speed to carry the team to victory.

Prominent Chinaman Dies.

Sunday night, the 5th, Tam Sing, a well-known Chinese merchant, died at his home in Makawao of hemorrhage of the lungs. Several years ago he suffered severely from pneumonia and since then has never been in robust health.

He was born in Canton, China, about 59 years ago and came to Makawao thirty-three years ago as bookkeeper for Tam Yau, who had established a general store three years previous. Later Tam Yau, Tam Sing, and Tam Chong formed a partnership and conducted a thriving business in Makawao until several years ago when Tam Sing bought out his two partners and became sole proprietor.

He is survived by a widow and thirteen children. He was a member of the Hawaiian Lodge of Knights of Pythias, a delegation of its members being present at his funeral.

The funeral services which were largely attended by all classes and denominations were held in the new St. Joseph's church, at Makawao, Rev. Father Rodrigues of Paia officiating.

Though Tam Sing did not openly become a Christian until the night of his death, his conduct whether in public or private, in family or business life seemed always to have been based upon Christian principles. His amiability of character caused him to make many friends.

Wm. A. Conway Passes Away.

An old and respected resident of Maui, Wm. A. Conway, died last Thursday, May 2, at his home in Waikapu. About two years ago Mr. Conway underwent an operation and since that time he has never been robust health.

Mr. Conway was born in Hilo, in 1860. He was educated in Hilo and Lahaina. After leaving school he worked for many years as freight clerk on the different Inter-Island boats. He was the first lighthouse keeper at Maalaea bay, and served as steamship agent at that point for 18 years.

In 1885 Mr. Conway married Mary Poepeo Silva of Waikapu. One son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Conway, who died of pneumonia while attending the Kamehameha Preparatory School in Honolulu, in 1902.

Mr. Conway was a man of quiet disposition and highly respected by everyone with whom he came in contact. He leaves a widow and two sisters to mourn his loss.
